Cookin' Up A Storm

THE LIFE AND RECIPES
OF ANNIE JOHNSON

UPDATED 2ND EDITION — BY JANE LEE RANKIN

“What a feast this book is. With infinite grace Jane Lee Rankin gifts us with her beloved Annie, her life and her food. This goes on the “keeper” shelf where in a few weeks it will be stained and splattered. Each recipe is a little siren’s song and I have no intention of resisting.”

— LYNNE ROSSETTO KASPER
Host of “The Splendid Table®”

“I’m a great admirer of this book. With compassion and warmth, Jane Lee Rankin pays homage to the fortitude and culinary mettle of a beautiful woman.”

— JOHN T. EDGE
Author of Southern Belly: The Ultimate Food Lover’s Guide to the South

“I highly recommend this cookbook. Cookin’ Up A Storm is a powerful story about an unforgettable woman featuring classic Southern recipes. It is a must have for every cookbook collection.”

— NATHALIE DUPREE
Author of Southern Memories: Recipes and Reminiscences

“A body could live on just these timeless dishes and never want for anything else to eat.”

— JOHN EGERTON
